The Michaelmas Cause Lists.

THE MICHAELMAS cause lists shew a considerable amount of business for the commencement of the legal year. The total of the appeals is 236, and the total of the causes in the High Court is 1,447. A year ago the corresponding figures were 308 and 1,465. The figures, we believe, are usually at their highest at Michaelmas, the natural result of the Summer Assizes and of the accumulation of new causes, and the present numbers show a considerable increase on those at the beginning of Trinity Sittings. Then the appeals were 215, and the total of causes in the High Court 868. Of the present appeals only 27 are from the Chancery Division; from the King's Bench Division there are 161, and from the Probate and Divorce Division 4. These last appeals include the Slingsby Legitimacy case. Among the King's Bench appeals are the land valuation cases of Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Smyth, and Hunter v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, which have been pending for more than a year; and there are the cases of Quirk v. Thomas (ante, p. 350) on the liability of a dead man's estate for breach of promise of marriage, and Papworth v. Battersea Borough Council on the liability of a highway authority for an accident to a cyclist caused by a defective gully. On the Chancery side there is an appeal against the recent decision of ASTBURY, J., in Wooten v. Lichfield Brewery Co. (ante, p. 744) on the effect of a covenant to insure licensed premises against loss of the licence. The Workmen's Compensation appeals are 33, exactly the same as a year ago.

The High Court Lists.

AS STATED above, the total of the causes in the High Court is 1,447, as against 1,465 a year ago, the numbers being thus practically the same. In the Chancery Division the numbers have slightly increased, 348 causes and 48 company matters now, as against 328 and 40 a year ago; and the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty list has risen from 421 to 553. These increases are nearly balanced by the drop in the King's Bench Division from 676 to 498. The present number of 498 in that division is made up as follows:—Divisional Court, 113; actions for trial, 373; and bankruptcy matters, 12. It may be noticed that the Probate and Divorce list is swollen by 362 undefended causes, and these account to some extent for the apparently healthy state of the total. But with Chancery matters standing at 348 and King's Bench actions at 373 the outlook for practitioners is not so bad as might have been expected after the lapse of more than a year of war conditions. The Divisional Court cases include the proceedings against Sir EDGAR SPEYER, which raise the question of his right to sit as a Privy Councillor.

Germany's Latest Arabic Note.

THE VOLUME of correspondence between the United States and the belligerent countries has very much decreased of late—partly no doubt because the time for discussion between the United States and Germany over the submarine incidents had gone by: it was for Germany to decide whether to moderate her course of action or not; and partly because, during the correspondence with Germany, the questions arising between the United States and Great Britain as to the blockade of Germany were suspended. Substantially, the discussion with Germany seems to be closed by the latest Note on the sinking of the Arabic (Times, 6th inst.), in which the German Government disavows the act of its submarine commander and offers to pay an indemnity for American lives lost in the Arabic. Incidentally, the Note is important because it recognises the good faith of the affidavit of the British officers, according to which the Arabic did not intend to ram the submarine. The case of the Hesperian is also closed, since the evidence seems to show that she was sunk by a mine and not torpedoed. The case of the Lusitania is still open, but the altered policy of Germany renders it very unlikely that that case, however much it is still deplored in America, can be a ground for further action. All this, of course, does not touch questions as to the conduct of the war arising between Great Britain and Germany, but we may note with satisfaction the tendency on the part of Germany to return to the path of civilisation and humanity which her latest Arabic Note suggests.

The Late Lord Justice Farwell.

AT A moment when trade unions are seeking to play in our political life the somewhat unexpected rôle of guardian of the liberty of the subject, the death of Sir GEORGE FARWELL inevitably recalls the great part played by that learned judge in the legal battle of fifteen years ago against the privilege of these societies. It is unnecessary to repeat here the appreciation of Lord Justice FARWELL as a judge and a lawyer which was published in these columns on his retirement two years since; but it is impossible to mention his name without mentioning at the same time the famous Taff Vale case (1901, A. C. 426), which won for him celebrity in the outside world where the most able and eminent of judicial dignitaries are seldom more than names. That case, as reported in the Law Reports, has the briefest of head-notes. The report occupies twenty pages and the headnote is no more than these few words: "A trade union, registered under the Trade Union Acts, 1871 and 1876, may be sued in its registered name. The decision of the Court of Appeal reversed and the decision of FARWELL, J., restored." Had ever a social revolution—for the decision was one—so slight a legal rubric? Certainly it was this decision which called into being skilled labour as an organized political force, bent on the quick attainment of a legislative reversal of the obnoxious decision; but, that task accomplished, the trade union party has remained with us—and seems likely to remain—as a force of great magnitude in our parliamentary struggles. Curiously enough, hardly any judge of our time had less connection with industrial disputes, either in the character of his practice or in his tone of mind, than Sir GEORGE FARWELL. An equity lawyer pure and simple, his earliest work of note at the Bar was the production of a learned treatise on the Law of Powers, abstrusest of conveyancing subjects; his whole practice lay in the Chancery Division, whence he never wandered into the common law courts or into the Privy Council; and it may be doubted if he had ever touched the Trade Union Acts before he was called on to interpret them in a leading case. A first-rate equity lawyer, the most courteous of judges, and the most genial of men, Lord Justice FARWELL will be remembered with affection and respect by the generation of barristers who practised in his court.

The Late Mr. Justice Bucknill.

WE HAVE also to record the death of Sir THOMAS BUCKNILL, who may not unfittingly be described as the best beloved of judges. He was not a great lawyer and he never pretended to be one. But he was the most human of men, a good sportsman and a loyal friend, and he displayed on the Bench the same sympathy and kindness towards witnesses and the public at large which endeared him to his comrades on circuit and in private life. A man of heart and feeling, possessed of abundant common sense as well as of much everyday sentiment, he readily won the sympathy of juries as an advocate, and a certain practical clearness of mind helped him to fight a case at once effectively and in a way that interested the spectator. A lover of horses, dogs, and guns, he wore on the Bench during all his sixteen years of judicial office something of the air of a racing squire, and many good stories of his sporting tendencies are current at the Bar. The best known is the story of how, as Vacation Judge, he heard counsel and granted an injunction in the interval of a battue at his shoot; and he used afterwards to relate laughingly how with one shot he nearly bagged three birds—a pheasant, a solicitor and a barrister. When betting cases came before a Divisional Court composed of Mr. Justice BUCKNILL and Mr. Justice DARLING, as, in the days following Hyam v. Stuart King (1908, 2 K. B. 696), they frequently did, those experienced sportsmen delighted the Bar by their racy acquaintance with all the lore of betting men. That case, it will be remembered, decided that, although no action lies to recover a wager, yet if the loser promises to pay in consideration of some pressure withheld by the winner, the latter can sue on this "new consideration." It was a long time before the courts succeeded in settling what are the legitimate "new considerations" to be recognized as adequate, and in the line of cases which unravelled this knot Mr. Justice BUCKNILL played a conspicuous part. The same instinct of the sportsman led him, when war broke out last year, to "do his bit" as a special constable near the Epsom railway line; and doubtless it is as a straight sportsman he would best have loved to be remembered.

Choosing Militia Men by Ballot.

A RUMOUR has recently been current according to which a scheme for compulsory military service has been prepared by the Government, in which it is proposed to adopt the ancient procedure of choosing by ballot those required to serve in the Militia. This procedure was regulated by different statutes conferring on the deputy-lieutenants of counties the power to choose by ballot a prescribed number of men for service in the local Militia. The military age was varied in different enactments, as was also the quota of men to be provided by each parish; but the principle of compulsory, in default of voluntary enlistment was accepted. Substitutes for those selected were allowed if they belonged to the same county and were fit for service, with not more than one child born in wedlock. The latest provision for the ballot is in the Militia Act, 1860, by which the deputy-lieutenants of counties, at subdivision meetings appointed for the purpose, are to cause twice the number of men required to serve in the Militia for each parish to be chosen by ballot as follows:—By calling over the names of the persons liable to be balloted from the parish list to be put into the box or glass for balloting, and then to be drawn out until the number of men to be chosen by ballot has been obtained. This mode of selection has a certain analogy to that regulating the nomination of jurymen, whose services, like those of Militia men, were compulsory. It will be remembered that in the case of special jurors numbers were written on pieces of parchment or card corresponding with the names in the special jurors' list, and these numbers put into a box, from which forty-eight were afterwards taken by the undersheriff. But the practical objection to making use of the Militia ballot seems to be that the Militia itself has disappeared as a force. It has been absorbed into the Special Reserve. Moreover, the compulsion did not extend to service abroad.

A Small Invention as Subject Matter for a Patent.

THE SUBJECT matter for the grant of a patent is an invention. If there be an invention de jure and de facto the quantum of invention is immaterial. The invention may be very small; it has often been stated that a scintilla of invention is sufficient. Of course, where this principle is invoked to support a patent, the invention will be closely scrutinised, and it must be borne in mind that it is not sufficient that the invention is ingenious; there must have been, as was laid down by COTTON, L.J. (7 R. P. C.

Oct. 9, 1915.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL &amp; WEEKLY REPORTER. [Vol. 59.] 769

67), "a substantial exercise of the inventive power or inventive faculty." This is illustrated by West v. Keeses and Sons (28 R. P. C. 474), where the alleged invention was in fact fastening a coil of tape and ribbon with elastic bands instead of rigid bands as usual, so that the tape or ribbon could be pulled out from the inside of the coil without entanglement. PARKER, J., held that the function of the elastic band as used by the patentee was not different from its function when used for other purposes, and that consequently there was no exercise of the inventive faculty. He said: "Though it may be important to encourage inventions, however small, having regard to their possible importance and the development of trade and manufacture, it is, in my opinion, equally important that traders and manufacturers should not be hampered by the granting of patents where there has really been no exercise of the inventive faculty at all." The latest case bearing on the subject is Esther v. Adjustable Shelving and Metal Construction Company (32 R. P. C. 501), which came before ASTBURY, J., shortly before the Vacation. There the patent was for "improvements in store bins." The improvements consisted in the construction of a nest or set of bins in a particular way so that they could be screwed up together to form a rigid mass, and in substituting metal shelves of a particular character for the wooden single shelf which existed before. The learned Judge held that there was sufficient invention to support the patent, although the subject matter was "a very modest one."

Cabinets within Cabinets.

THERE IS nothing new under the sun—in politics, at any rate. Hence students of English constitutional history will not be greatly surprised to find that the demand of last spring for a Coalition Cabinet has been followed by a similar demand for a smaller Cabinet within the larger one, and that this demand has been partially met by the establishment of the War Committee. On the merits of this scheme it is not for us to pronounce. But it was tried by CHARLES II. in 1679—a famous episode in our history which MACAULAY has immortalized in his essay on Sir WILLIAM TEMPLE. Harassed by the strife of Whigs and Tories, faced with a French War, CHARLES acted on the advice of TEMPLE and founded a "Council of Thirty," composed in equal numbers of the leading members of each political party, which was to decide all questions of State. The country rejoiced at the promised cessation of political strife. The Council was organized on 21st April, 1679, but within a few hours of its formation, MACAULAY tells us, its fundamental principle was violated. A smaller committee of nine members was formed to guide the larger one, which was found to be unmanageable. But the nine proved as incapable of agreeing with each other's schemes as had the thirty. So a still smaller committee was formed within this committee, an interior Cabinet of four—ESSEX, SUNDERLAND, HALIFAX, and TEMPLE. The four acted in harmony with one another, but all the twenty-six excluded members of Council united against them. And so the experiment failed and party government was restored.

British Nationality.

THE part of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act 1914, which is most important, and which nevertheless seems to have received least consideration, is section 1. This constitutes the whole of Part I., and is the provision which defines "natural-born British subjects." In contradistinction to these we have naturalized aliens, and Part II. defines this second class of British subjects and also provides that naturalization shall confer British nationality not only in the United Kingdom, but in the King's dominions generally, though as regards the five self-governing dominions—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Newfoundland—only when the dominion has adopted the present Act. It was this provision—finally arranged at the Imperial Conference of 1911—for extending the effect of naturalization over the whole of the British Empire which chiefly received the attention of Parliament when the Bill was under discussion (Hansard, H.L., vol. 15, 5th series, p. 503; H.C., vol. 62, 5th series, p. 1198). Section 1 was apparently treated as a mere consolidating section, and Parliament relied upon the draftsman having done his task of consolidation correctly.

But the question of the naturalization of aliens seems to be of minor importance compared with that of ascertaining who are natural-born British subjects, and from the point of view both of history and the laws of other nations section 1 deserves more consideration than it has hitherto received. The question whether a person is a subject or an alien is determined by the municipal law of the country in question, and different countries have adopted different rules. These are based either on the ius soli or the ius sanguinis. The English common law rule of nationality is based on the ius soli. "To the common law," said the Report of the Inter-Departmental Committee of 1901 on the Naturalization Laws, "belongs the fundamental principle that any person who is born within His Majesty's Dominions is from the moment of his birth a British subject, whatever may be the nationality of either or both of his parents, and however temporary and casual the circumstances determining the locality of his birth may have been." Opposed to the ius soli is the principle that the nationality of a child follows that of its parents, and this is now incorporated in the law of most States. It was enacted by the Code Napoléon, and is the law prevailing on the Continent generally; for instance, in Germany, Austria, Hungary, and Belgium (Hall, International Law, 6th ed., p. 223; Oppenheim, 2nd ed., vol. 1, p. 375). Hence arises the possibility of double nationality. But though the former rule is said to be based on birth within the State, it rests at common law on birth "within the allegiance," a term which is much less definite. "The rule really is," says the Report just referred to, "that all persons born in the allegiance are subjects of the Crown." Now as to the meaning of the "Liegance of the King," and its effect on naturalization, we may refer to an interesting article under that title by Sir FRANCIS PIGGOTT, late Chief Justice of Hong-Kong, in the current number of the Nineteenth Century. It is, perhaps, too much coloured by the feelings of the hour to be accepted as a permanent contribution to the study of the subject, but it throws useful light on the principles of nationality.

For the meaning of "liegance," or in its modern form "allegiance," we must go back to Calvin's case (7 Rep. 1A), and to COKE (Co. Litt. 129A), and then we find that it is "the mutual bond and obligation between the King and his subjects, whereby subjects are called his liege subjects, because they are bound to obey and serve him; and he is called their liege lord, because he should maintain and defend them . . . Therefore it is truly said that protectio trahit subjectionem et subjectio protectionem." Logically, therefore, the allegiance of the individual cannot be the test of citizenship. Citizenship—or the status of subject—must be ascertained first, and when ascertained it carries with it the mutual bond of allegiance. "Liegance," we may quote again from Calvin's case, "is a true and faithful obedience of the subject due to his Sovereign." And this exists at birth: "for as soon as he is born he oweth by birthright liegance and obedience to his Sovereign."

One way of removing the inconsistency is to note that the allegiance which makes citizenship at birth is not the allegiance of the child, but the allegiance of its parents, and this need not be the absolute allegiance due from a subject to his Sovereign. It may be the temporary allegiance or actual obedience due from an alien in the Sovereign's dominions. The point is of importance when we try to give a meaning to the clause in section 1 of the recent Act which defines the first class of natural-born British subjects. That class includes "any person born within His Majesty's dominions and allegiance." Now, as we have seen, the Inter-Departmental Committee's report says there are two rules, first a general rule that all persons born within the King's dominions are British subjects, and secondly a more accurate rule—that all persons born within the King's allegiance are British subjects. At first sight it is an odd method of draftsmanship just to combine two differing rules—the popular and the accurate rule—in one sentence, and to define as British subjects all persons born within the King's dominions and allegiance, and it might have been supposed that the draftsman would have elected for one form of the rule or the other. But if allegiance as here used has the meaning just suggested, this new statement of the rule becomes intelligible. Prima facie birth within the dominions is sufficient, and the additional requirement of "within the allegiance" is added by way of qualification. It means, on this hypothesis, that the parents must at the time of birth be under actual obedience to the Crown (see Calvin's case, ubi supra, pp. 6A, 18A). In time of peace the qualification has no practical effect. All persons within the King's dominions, whether subjects or aliens, are under actual obedience to the Crown, and are therefore within "the liegeance," and their children are British. In time of war the qualification takes effect if a hostile force takes possession of part of the King's dominions and any member of that force has issue here; such issue would not be born "within the allegiance" (Calvin's case, ubi supra, pp. 6A, 18A). But this classic example does not extend to the case of an alien enemy who is peacefully residing here. His issue would, we imagine, be British, and this apparently would be so even if the father were interned at the time of birth.

The term "within the allegiance" may also be construed as meaning "within territory owing allegiance to" the King, and this is probably its more usual meaning. The phrase "within the realm" was used in contradistinction to "within the liegeance" and was intended to include places outside England which owed allegiance to the Crown. A man might be born "out of the realm of England, yet within the liegeance" (Co. Litt. 129A); if, for instance, he was born at Calais before it was lost (Calvin's case, ubi supra, p. 22A). But if used in section 1 (1) (a) in this sense, the addition of "within the allegiance" to "within the dominions" would be mere repetition and would be meaningless.

Since in English law nationality depends on the jus soli it follows that, strictly, no person born abroad can be a British subject, and this was the doctrine of the common law. There was an exception in favour of children of the Sovereign, and also in favour of children of an ambassador born abroad; the latter perhaps on the principle that an ambassador carries his country with him : De Geer v. Stone (22 Ch. D., p. 254). But successive inroads were made on the common law by statute. The Act 25 Ed. 3, stat. 1 (1350), enacted that children "without the liegeance" of the King, whose fathers and mothers at the time of their birth should be "at the faith and liegeance of the King," might inherit land "within the same liegeance"; and the Act 7 Anne, c. 5 (1708), enacted more generally that the children of all natural-born subjects born out of the liegeance should be deemed to be natural-born subjects to all intents. This was found to go too far, and was explained and restrained by 4 Geo. 2, c. 21 (1730), s. 1, the effect being to require that the father of the child born abroad must be a British subject at the time of the child's birth. And then the Act 13 Geo. 3, c. 21 (1773), s. 1, extended British nationality to the grandchildren, by enacting that persons born out of the liegeance whose fathers were by statute put on the footing of natural-born subjects should themselves be taken to be natural-born subjects. Thus where a child born abroad of an actual natural-born British subject was made a British subject by 4 Geo. 2, c. 21, his children born abroad were made British subjects by 13 Geo. 3, c. 21. These were attempts to graft the jus sanguinis on the jus soli, and in effect they made the jus sanguinis the rule of British law as far as the third generation.

Now the Inter-Departmental Committee recommended that the extension to the third generation should be repealed, so that British nationality would cease with the children born abroad of a natural-born British subject. The provision actually inserted in section 1 (1) of the recent Act is as follows :—

(b) Any person born out of His Majesty's dominions, whose father was a British subject at the time of that person's birth, and either was born within His Majesty's allegiance or was a person to whom a certificate of naturalization had been granted.

And there is the following proviso :—

Provided that the child of a British subject, whether that child was born before or after the passing of this Act, shall be deemed to have been born within His Majesty's allegiance if born in a place where by treaty, capitulation, grant, usage, sufferance or other lawful means, His Majesty exercises jurisdiction over British subjects.

In the article referred to above, Sir FRANCIS PIGGOTT assumes that those provisions do not, as the Committee proposed, cut off grandchildren born abroad. On the contrary, he appears to regard them as extending the jus sanguinis indefinitely. "The son of a British father is now," he says, "a British subject irrespective of the place of his birth, if he be born after 1st January, 1915." But he does not say how he arrives at this result, and we doubt whether the statute is capable of such a construction. Apart from the special extension in the proviso, the phrase "within His Majesty's allegiance" seems in this clause to be equivalent to "within His Majesty's dominions," and the father must either have been actually British born or have been naturalized; that is, it is only the child born abroad, and not the grandchild, who is naturalized. In the special places mentioned in the proviso—such, we suppose, as Egypt—the jus sanguinis is carried on indefinitely, but not, as we read the statute, anywhere else, and in effect 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, is repealed and not re-enacted. This result does not seem to be prevented by the definition of "British subject" in section 27. Section 1 of the new Act will not improbably have surprises in store when it comes to be judicially considered, and we make the above comments with some diffidence. We are not sure that the difficulties we feel with regard to the statute will be felt by others. But an error which the draughtsman has made in repealing the Act 25 Ed. 3, stat. 1 (stat. 2 in the Statutes at Large of 1811)—Statutum De Natis Ultra Mare—makes us suspicious of his treatment of the matter. The statute, after dealing with the children of the King born abroad, proceeds, "et endroit des autres enfants," and this in the edition just referred to is correctly translated "and in respect of other children." But in other editions the translators have fallen into the error of turning it into "and in the right of other children," which is nonsense, and the draughtsman of the present Act has repeated the error. French is a facile language to translate, but it is as well to keep an eye on the meaning.

The late Mr. Henry Thomson.

MANY will have read last week with heartfelt regret the intelligence that HENRY THOMSON, barrister-at-law of Lincoln's Inn (1902) and, since October 19, 1914, Lieutenant in the 7th S. Staffordshire Regiment, died in London on September 26 of wounds received abroad. Whatever the tragic welter of the struggle, in which Britain and her Allies are fighting to victory for the cause of public law in Europe, may yet have in store, it is permissible to think that no higher example of the response of a rising professional man to the call of duty can be found than that of HENRY THOMSON. His courage and a certain modest nobility it involved, will perhaps occasion something like mournful envy to men a little older than himself. To the multitude of the younger members of the legal profession who, with their fellows from outside, are still daily training in Lincoln's Inn and the Temple he will be an inspiring pattern.

A son of the late ANDREW THOMSON, LL.D., Reader in Equity to the Inns of Court, HENRY THOMSON was educated at University College, London, and Balliol College, Oxford, where he took his degree with honours in mathematics, afterwards proceeding B.C.L. and M.A. After his call to the Bar in 1902 he practised on the Chancery side, and quietly but surely worked his way through the fighting ranks of the Bar into a position that belied his modesty and was likely, one cannot doubt, to ripen into solid success. It was in 1910 that, in giving judgment in the Court of Appeal in a Settled Land Act case (Re Davies & Kent's Contract, 1910, 2 Ch. 35), Lord Justice BUCKLEY, as he then was, remarked: "The discussion in this case has been to myself an intellectual treat, and it is Mr. THOMSON who has provided the principal delicacies of the banquet. Every point, as far as I can see, has been taken and urged before the Court with a clearness which I have rarely known equalled." Such a compliment, endorsed as it was by the Master of the Rolls and the late Lord Justice KENNEDY, is merited and received by few. And now the man to whom it was an inspiration amid the anxieties of his professional career has given his life for the cause of his country in a strife at that time so remote from anything he dreamt of for the future. The writer of these few lines of sorrowful commemoration, knowing him well as a professional comrade, although not in the full intimacy of an old friendship, met him, eager and debonair, on the last occasion of his being in Lincoln's Inn. Scarcely suppressing his zest for the prospect of active service, with a keenness enriched by the judgment born of years of experience, he spoke of his joy in being a soldier, and of his hope to return to the ranks of the profession which the nation's need had induced him to leave for a time. Now he will not come back, but his death gives one more noble touch of significance to the hallowed patriotism of the happy Warrior.

War Orders and Proclamations, &c.

The London Gazette of 1st October contains the following:—

1. A Foreign Office Notice, dated 30th September, containing additions or corrections to the lists recently published (see ante, p. 764) of persons to whom articles to be exported to China and Siam may be consigned.

2. An Order, dated 1st October (printed below), of the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) for the London Area.

3. A Notice to Mariners (No. 886 of the year 1915, cancelling No. 549 of 1915), relating to Scotland, East Coast, and Orkney Isles, and providing for compulsory pilotage at certain ports on account of defensive minefields.

The London Gazette of 5th October contains the following:—

4. An Order in Council, dated 4th October, further amending the Exportation Prohibition Proclamation of 28th July, 1915, as amended and added to by subsequent Orders in Council. It includes the following:—

(5) That the heading "Coal (including anthracite and steam, gas, household, and all other kinds of coal) and coke" in the list of goods the exportation of which is prohibited to all destinations abroad other than British Possessions and Protectorates should be deleted, and there be substituted therefor the heading "Coal, all kinds, and coke, but not including coal allowed by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise to be shipped as bunker coal."

5. A Post Office Notice, dated 5th October (printed below), restricting telephone messages to the English language.

6. Two Notices to Mariners, dated 1st October (No. 890 of the year 1915), relating to Scotland, West Coast, Hebrides, Lewis, and No. 888 of the year 1915, relating to Scotland, North East Coast, Pentland, and Moray Firths. The latter restricts navigation in the Pentland and Moray Firths, and contains the following caution:—

Neutral or Allied vessels are particularly warned that the passage through the Pentland Firth presents very grave risks to a Westbound vessel, and are strongly advised not to take it.

Defence of the Realm (Liquor Control).

ORDER OF THE CENTRAL CONTROL BOARD (LIQUOR TRAFFIC) FOR THE LONDON AREA.

Any person contravening any provision of this Order or of the Liquor Control Regulations is liable to imprisonment for six months with hard labour and a fine of £100.

We, the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic), in pursuance of the powers conferred upon us by the Acts and Regulations relating to the Defence of the Realm, hereby make the following Order:—

Limits of Area.

1. The area to which this Order applies is the London area, being the area comprising the City of London, the Metropolitan Police district, the Urban District of Watford in the County of Herts, the Petty Sessional Division of Romford in the County of Essex, the Urban District of Dartford, and the Parishes of Darenth, Stone, Sutton-at-Hone, Swanscombe and Wilmington in the County of Kent.

Treating Prohibited.

2. No person shall either by himself or by any servant or agent sell or supply any intoxicating liquor to any person in any licensed premises or in any club for consumption on the premises unless the same is ordered and paid for by the person so supplied; nor shall any person order or pay for or lend or advance money to pay for any intoxicating liquor wherever with any other person has been or is to be supplied for consumption on the premises; nor shall any person consume in any licensed premises or club any intoxicating liquor which any other person has ordered or paid for or agreed to pay for or lent or advanced money to pay for.

Provided always that if such intoxicating liquor is supplied or served for consumption at a meal supplied at the same time and is consumed at such meal the provisions of this regulation shall not be deemed to be contravened if the person who pays for such meal also pays for such intoxicating liquor.

For the purposes of this regulation consumption on the premises includes consumption of intoxicating liquor in or on any highway, open ground or railway station adjoining or near to the licensed premises or club in which the liquor was sold or supplied, and any person consuming intoxicating liquor in or on any such highway, open ground or railway station shall be deemed to consume the liquor in such licensed premises or club as the case may be.

Dilution of Spirits.

3. The sale of whisky, brandy, and rum, reduced to a number of degrees under proof which falls between 25 and 35, and of gin reduced to a number of degrees under proof which falls between 35 and 45, is hereby permitted, and accordingly, in determining whether an offence has been committed under the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts by selling to the prejudice of the purchaser brandy, whisky, rum, or gin, not adulterated otherwise than by the admixture of water, it shall be a good defence to prove that such admixture has not reduced the spirit more than 35 degrees under proof in the case of whisky, brandy, or rum, or 45 degrees under proof in the case of gin.

Amendment of the Dartford District Order.

4. Articles 2 and 3 of this Order shall be substituted for Articles 7 and 9 of the Order of the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) made on the 26th day of July, 1915, for the area of Dartford District, which said Articles are hereby revoked.

Exhibition of Order.

5. Every holder of a licence for the sale of intoxicating liquor and the secretary of every club to which this Order applies shall keep permanently affixed in some conspicuous place in each public room in the licensed premises or in the club a copy of this Order and any notice required by the Board to be affixed.

Commencement of Order.

6. This Order shall come into force on the eleventh day of October, 1915.

Post Office.

TELEGRAPHS.

In pursuance of the Telephone Regulations, 1915, His Majesty's Postmaster General gives notice that until further notice no telephone shall be used for the transmission of any message or communication except in the English language, unless specific permission to employ some other language has been obtained.—Dated this 5th day of October, 1915.

Service at Westminster Abbey.

TUESDAY, 12TH OCTOBER, 1915.

On the occasion of the re-opening of the Law Courts, a special service will be held at Westminster Abbey, at 11.30 a.m., which the Lord Chancellor and His Majesty's judges will attend.

In order to ascertain what space will be required, members of the junior bar wishing to be present are requested to send their names to the secretary of the General Council of the Bar, 2, Hare-court, Temple, E.C., before 4 p.m. on Monday, 11th October.

Barristers attending the service must wear robes. All should be at the Jerusalem Chamber, Westminster Abbey (Dean's Yard entrance), where robing accommodation will be provided, not later than 11.15 a.m.

A limited number of seats in the South Transept will be reserved for friends of members of the bar, to whom one ticket of admission (or if possible two) will be issued on application to the secretary of the General Council of the Bar.

No tickets are required for admission to the North Transept, which is open to the public.

EDWARD CARSON, Attorney-General.

The late John Lindsay, a Coatbridge ironmaster, left £1,400 for the erection of a statue of the great Sir William Wallace in Glasgow, with the inscription "Erected by John Lindsay, Greenfield Cottage, Glen-garnock, as a tribute of admiration to the memory of Sir William Wallace, who was betrayed by Menteith." The Glasgow Town Council, however, have resolved not to grant a site, and now the heirs of Mr. Lindsay are claiming before the Scottish Courts in Edinburgh that the bequest has failed and falls to them.

Societies.

Bristol Incorporated Law Society.

The following is the report of the Council of the above Society, presented at the forty-fifth annual meeting, 1915:—

Pursuant to the articles of association the Council present their annual report:—

Legislation.—Since the last annual report the Acts of Parliament which have been passed have been almost entirely of an emergency nature connected with the war. Among others to which the Council desire to draw attention are the following, viz.:—The Execution of Trusts (War Facilities) Acts, 1914 and 1915, the various Defence of the Realm and Trading with the Enemy Acts, the Legal Proceedings against Enemies Act, 1915, and the War Loan (Trustees) Act, 1915.

Legal Education.—The Law Society were only able to grant £25 this year for this purpose to the Bristol and District Board of Legal Studies, in lieu of their usual annual grant of £150, and there not being a sufficient number of articled clerks owing to the war, the classes were discontinued after the Michaelmas term. The subjects dealt with during this term, for which six students only joined, were as follows:—Real Property and Company Law for Senior Students, by Mr. A. M. Wilshire, and Personal Property and Bankruptcy for Junior Students, by Mr. C. A. Chilton. During the year only three articled clerks from Bristol passed the final examination of the Law Society, while there were no candidates for the intermediate examination.

The War.—Of the 250 solicitors practising in Bristol, 47, including Captain W. Sefton Clarke, the president-elect, are serving with His Majesty's forces. One, Mr. L. T. Dickinson, was killed in action near Ypres while serving as a trooper in the North Somerset Yeomanry; another, Mr. H. H. Perham, died in hospital; Lieutenant F. S. Hawkes was wounded in the Dardanelles, and Captain S. L. Harvey had the honour of being mentioned in Sir John French's despatch of 31st May, 1915, "for gallant and distinguished service in the field." In addition, 32 solicitors beyond military age have joined the Bristol Volunteer Regiment. Further, 28 articled clerks are also serving, of whom one, Mr. A. C. Curtis, was wounded at Ypres. The Council consider that this is a record of which the Society may well be proud.

Earlier Closing of Night Clubs.

The military and police authorities met at the Home Office on Wednesday, on the invitation of Sir John Simon, to consider the measures that should be taken to deal with the night club evil in the Metropolitan Police area and some adjacent districts. The proceedings, which were private, lasted for several hours.

The Times learns that at the close the Home Secretary announced his intention to introduce a short Act of Parliament on the reassembling of the House of Commons, which, in his opinion, would meet the situation and provide the police and military authorities with the powers that they need.

The Act will probably provide for the closing of all clubs at 12.30 a.m., thus bringing them into line with the restaurants. It is also understood that the authorities will be granted larger powers in other directions.

Hours of Drinking in London.

The Times understands that the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) have decided to obtain an Order in Council further reducing the hours during which the sale of alcoholic liquor may be permitted on licensed premises in London and district. As in the case of the "No Treating" Order, the new regulation will apply, not only to the Metropolitan and City Police District but also to Watford and Romford, as well as Dartford and certain other parishes in Kent. For all practical purposes London and its surrounding districts will be treated like Liverpool and other urban areas scheduled under the Defence of the Realm Act, but some exemptions will be made.

It is proposed that the hours during which alcoholic liquor may be supplied on licensed premises and in clubs shall be from 12 noon to 2.30 p.m., and from 6 until 9 p.m. The closing hour and the question of exemptions have not been definitely settled. At the various conferences which have been held to consider the question there was strong opposition to the proposed exemption of districts. A scheme of exemption is being considered which would enable those engaged in night work, such as newspaper employees, market porters, and men employed on certain work at the docks, to obtain necessary refreshment during the prohibited hours. A system of granting permits finds favour.

The Anglo-French Loan.

The Treasury desire to point out that it is very undesirable in the public interest that persons or firms in the United Kingdom should subscribe to or purchase the forthcoming Anglo-French Loan in America. The main purpose of the loan is to give support to the American exchanges, and remittances from the United Kingdom for the purpose either of subscribing to or purchasing the loan, or of replacing funds already in America which may be employed for such subscription or purchase, would have the effect of defeating this object.

Holders of the loan who reside in the United Kingdom will be liable to income-tax on the dividends as in the case of income from other securities held abroad, and dealings in the loan will not be permitted upon any Stock Exchange in the United Kingdom.

Obituary.

Sir George Farwell.

We regret to record the death of Sir George Farwell, formerly a Lord Justice of Appeal, on Thursday, at Knowle, Dunster, Somerset. He resigned his position in the Court of Appeal in 1913 owing to ill-health, but after a rest he was able recently to sit in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. In April last he delivered the judgment of the Board in a Canadian appeal.

Born on 22nd December, 1845, the second son of Mr. Frederick Cooper Farwell, of Tettenhall, Staffordshire, and Totnes, Devon, Farwell went to Rugby in Temple's days, and thence to Balliol as a commoner, where he obtained a first class in Moderations and a second in the Final Classical Schools. He was called to the Bar in November, 1871, and devoted his first years of professional life to producing his well-known work on Powers. This appeared in 1874, and a second edition was issued in 1893.

Farwell became a Q.C. in 1891, and attached himself to the Court of Mr. Justice Chitty, where he soon established a substantial practice, his principal opponent being the late Mr. Justice Byrne. When Chitty was promoted to the Court of Appeal Farwell transferred himself to Mr. Justice Romer's Court. In 1899 he was appointed an additional judge of the Chancery Division, and in the Vacation of 1900 delivered his famous judgment in the Taff Vale Railway Co.'s Case, holding that a trade union could be sued in its registered name. His decision was reversed by the Court of Appeal, but restored by the House of Lords, a result which led to the passing of the Trade Disputes Act, 1906.

In June, 1906, Sir George Farwell was appointed a Lord Justice in succession to Sir James Stirling, who had resigned, but before taking up his duties in that tribunal he continued the conduct of the inquiry into what was known as the South African "stores scandal." That inquiry was entrusted to a Royal Commission to report upon all contracts, sales, and refunds to contractors in South Africa. By a special Act of Parliament provision was made in July, 1905, for a full investigation under the chairmanship of Sir George Farwell.

As a member of the Court of Appeal he took part in the hearing of the West Riding School case, in which he concurred with the Master of the Rolls, the late Lord Collins, and differed from his brother Moulton. The House of Lords, however, came to a different conclusion, and held that under the Education Act, 1902, the local authority was bound to pay for the religious education afforded in non-provided elementary schools. It was also his duty to take part in two important trade union appeals—Conway v. Wade and Osborne's Case.

Sir George Farwell, who in 1908 received the honorary degree of LL.D. from Edinburgh University, married, in 1873, Mary Erskine, daughter of the late Vice-Chancellor Sir J. Wickens, and had several children.

A memorial service will be held in the chapel at Lincoln's Inn on Tuesday next, the 12th October, at 4.15 p.m.

Sir Thomas Bucknill.

Sir Thomas Bucknill, formerly a judge of the King's Bench Division, died on Monday morning in his seventy-first year, at Hylands House, Epsom, after a long period of bad health.

Thomas Townsend Bucknill was the second son of the famous lunacy doctor, Sir J. C. Bucknill, F.R.S., who was one of Arnold's pupils at Rugby, and from 1862 to 1876 was one of the Lord Chancellor's visitors in Lunacy. He was born on 18th April, 1845, his mother having been a daughter of Mr. Thomas Townsend, of Hillmorton Hall, near Rugby. His education was at Westminster, but he did not go to the University, completing his studies at Geneva. He was called to the Bar in 1868 by the Inner Temple, of which he became a Bencher in 1891. His early years in the profession were years of struggle and of slender resources; but his unfailing cheerfulness and ingenuous, almost boyish, charm of manner helped him over his difficulties and made him many friends; and by degrees he obtained a large junior practice on circuit. He was junior to Mr. Charles Russell, Q.C. (afterwards Lord Chief Justice) for one of the defendants in the famous trial of the West of England Bank directors at the Central Criminal Court in 1880 before Lord Chief Justice Cockburn. The trial lasted from 28th April to 6th May, and ended in the triumphant acquittal of all seven defendants. At the end of seventeen years Bucknill was able to take silk, and in the same year, 1885, he became Recorder of Exeter and held that office until his promotion to the Bench. In 1892 he was returned as a Conservative for Mid-Surrey, defeating Mr. T. A. Brassey by a majority of 2,400. Three years later he encountered no opposition.

In January, 1899, he was appointed a judge of the King's Bench Division in succession to Mr. Justice Hawkins, afterwards Lord Brampton,

As a judge his career was marked rather by urbanity and practical efficiency than by legal eminence.

Sir Thomas Bucknill was a neighbour of Lord Russell of Killowen at Epsom, and the two men were united in friendship by a common love of sport. Bucknill was a capital horseman and rode to hounds, and was occasionally competitor or umpire in the Bar point to point races. He married in 1878 a daughter of Mr. Henry Bell Ford, of Clifton, and he leaves two sons, both members of the Bar.

Mr. Harold T. Cawley.

Mr. H. T. Cawley, Liberal M.P. for the Heywood Division of Lancashire, has been killed in action at the Dardanelles. Mr. Cawley was Sir Frederick Cawley's second son, and was born in 1878. Educated at Rugby and New College, Oxford, he was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1902, and practised on the Northern Circuit. He was elected for Heywood at the two General Elections of 1910 by substantial majorities. He early attracted the attention of Ministers, and acted as Parliamentary Private Secretary first to Mr. Runciman and afterwards to Mr. McKenna. Although one of the most promising of the younger Liberal members, he did not speak often, and then chiefly on economic questions. His style was restrained and cultivated, and he was personally much liked. He was a lieutenant in the Manchester Regiment (T.F.), and had obtained his company since the outbreak of war.

Mr. E. A. Hume.

Captain Edward Archibald Hume, 7th South Staffordshire Regiment, died on 27th August in a hospital ship on the voyage home, of wounds received in Gallipoli on 25th July. He was the second son of Edward Hume, of Lincoln's Inn, barrister-at-law (late one of the Conveyancing Counsel to the Court), and the late Agnes Mary Hume. He was himself called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1902, and practised at the Common Law Bar, going the Western Circuit, until appointed Chief Magistrate of the Crown Colony of the Gambia in 1909, from which post he retired in 1913. At the outbreak of war he was the prospective Unionist candidate for Banffshire. In September, 1914, he was appointed a postal censor, and in December he received a commission in the 7th South Staffords. His younger brother, Lieutenant C. G. Hume, of the 1st Battalion (38th) of the same regiment, was killed at Ypres in October last. Captain E. A. Hume was educated at St. David's, Reigate, and at Winchester and Trinity College, Oxford. He married, in 1912, Violet Mary Hope, daughter of the late James L. A. Hope, of Whitney-on-Wye, Herefordshire.

Mr. Cecil B. Gedge.

Lieutenant Cecil Bertie Gedge, London Regiment, who has recently been killed, was forty-nine years of age, and was the only surviving son of Mr. Sydney Gedge (of Messrs. Gedge, Kirby & Millet), formerly solicitor to the London School Board. He was called to the Bar by the Inner Temple in 1891, and practised on the South-Eastern Circuit and at the Essex and Herts Sessions. He was one of the authors of the article on Aliens in the "Laws of England." He was appointed to a commission in the London Regiment in April.

Mr. L. C. F. Oldfield.

Captain Laurel Cecil Francis Oldfield, of the 12th Rifle Brigade, who has been killed in France, was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Oldfield, of 6, Wilton-street, Grosvenor-place, S.W. He took his degree at Lincoln College, Oxford, and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1909. He was the author of a work on "The Law of Copyright." He joined the Inns of Court O.T.C. at the outbreak of the war, was gazetted temporary captain last March, and went to France early in July.

Mr. Harold Martin Clarke.

Lieutenant Harold Martin Clarke, London Regiment, who has recently been killed in France, was the son of Mr. George W. Clarke, Town Clerk of Stepney. He was educated at Whitgift School and at Clare College, Cambridge, of which University he was an M.A. He was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in 1911. He received his commission as lieutenant at the end of August last year.

Mr. J. E. K. Hall.

Second Lieutenant John Edward Kenyon Hall, 2nd South Wales Borderers, was the third and youngest son of Edward K. Hall, of Kevin Nairn, and formerly of Holly Bush, Staffordshire. He was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Oxford, and was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1905. In September, 1914, he enlisted in the University and Public Schools Corps, and early in 1915 got a commission in the 3rd South Wales Borderers. Early in August he went out with a draft of men to join the 2nd South Wales Borderers, and landed in Gallipoli. He was wounded on 10th September, and died on the 22nd.

Mr. Winfield J. Bonser.

Captain Winfield Joyce Bonser, who has been killed in France, was the only son of the late Sir J. Winfield Bonser, P.C., of 3, Eaton-place, S.W. He was born in 1886, and educated at Westminster and Cambridge, where he took a first class in Classics, and honours in Law. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple on 1911. He joined the Inns of Court O.T.C. on the outbreak of war, and received a commission in the Rifle Brigade in September, 1914.

Mr. W. M. Hughes-Hughes.

Captain William Montagu Hughes-Hughes, Welsh Regiment, who has been killed in France, was educated at Tonbridge School and Hertford College, Oxford (First Class Jurisprudence, 1907), and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1909. He joined the Inns of Court O.T.C., and on the outbreak of the war accepted a commission in the Welsh Regiment. He was rapidly advanced to a captaincy, proceeding to France in July last.

Mr. Maurice A. M. Davies.

Second Lieutenant Maurice Albert Mervyn Davies, 9th Devon Regiment, who has recently been killed, was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Davies, of 5r, Montagu-mansions, Portman-square, late of Karri-dale, Western Australia, and was born at Adelaide in 1890. He was educated at Fettes and New College, Oxford, where he took his degree with second class honours in History in 1911, and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1914. He served three years in the Oxford O.T.C., and on 19th September, 1914, was appointed second lieutenant in the 9th Devon Regiment.

Mr. Christopher Mead.

Second Lieutenant Christopher Mead, of the 4th (attached to 2nd) East Surrey Regiment, who has recently been killed, was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Mead, of St. Mary's, Teddington. He was born in 1888, and was educated at Charterhouse, where he was in both the football and cricket teams. He was admitted as a solicitor in 1913 and was a member of the firm of Mead & Co., of the Inner Temple. He joined the Inns of Court O.T.C. some years ago, obtained his commission in the East Surrey Regiment in August, 1914, and proceeded to the front in France in May last. He was wounded in July, but remained on duty.

Mr. William George Hobbs.

Lieutenant W. G. Hobbs, 8th Royal Berkshire Regiment, who has recently been killed, was the only son of Mr. W. G. Hobbs, Chief Clerk at the West London Police Court, and was twenty-four years old. He was educated at University College and London University, where he was a member of the Cadet Corps and the Officers' Training Corps respectively. He was admitted a solicitor in 1913. He was a well-known lacrosse player, being a member of the Middlesex team and also of the team that visited Sweden in 1913.

Mr. Lawrence V. Chapman.

Lieutenant Lawrence Vaughan Chapman, B.A., LL.B., of the 2nd Rifle Brigade, who has been killed in Flanders, was a son of Mr. L. Chapman, of Sunbury-on-Thames, and grandson of the late Rev. I. M. Chapman, M.A., Fellow of Balliol and rector of Tendring, Essex. He was educated at King's College School and the University of London; of the latter he was a prizeman, medallist, and exhibitioner, taking his degree in both arts and law with honours. After serving his articles he passed the solicitor's final with honours and was appointed by Sir H. Holden a member of the legal staff of the City and Midland Bank. He was gazetted from the Reserve of Officers to the Rifle Brigade on 5th May, 1914, and left for the front on 13th May, 1915. He was promoted lieutenant in July last.

Mr. C. J. R. Dawkins.

Second Lieutenant Charles John Randle Dawkins, 9th (Service) Batt. Welsh Regiment, who was killed in France on 25th September, was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Dawkins, of Redhill, Haverfordwest, and was educated at Haverfordwest Grammar School and Clifton College. He was a B.A. and LL.B. of Cambridge, having taken a first in Law and a second in the Historical Tripos. At the time he joined he was attached to Mr. C. W. M. Price, 10, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

Mr. Bernard U. Hare.

Second Lieutenant Bernard Urmston Hare, who has recently been killed, was educated at Highgate School and was in the Officers' Training Corps. He subsequently joined the Artists' Rifles and was attached to them when war broke out. He was given his commission in the 14th Middlesex Regiment in November of last year, but served throughout with the 1st Middlesex in France. He was in command of the regimental bomb-throwers. For many years he was scoutermaster of the large 66th North London troop of Boy Scouts. Mr. Hare was the youngest grandson of Mr. Evan Hare, of Putney, and late of the Temple, solicitor; he was a law student, and had not war broken out would have sat for his final LL.B. of the University of London last autumn. His eldest brother, Amyas, fell on 10th March at Neuve Chapelle. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hare's eldest surviving son, Frank, is serving as second-in-command of a destroyer in the Royal Navy, and their second son, Jack, a lieutenant in the 2/10th Middlesex, has been reported wounded in the Gallipoli Peninsula.

General.

"A Trustee" writes to the Times as follows in support of a further adjustment in the "minimum prices" of trustee stocks to the current rate of interest on gilt-edged securities. His experience is, of course, a fairly common one just now:—"It has recently been my duty under the advancement clause in a small trust for minors to find a certain sum by the sale of capital. We had at our disposal Corporation Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Stock, Indian Railway Annuities, and British Railway Four per Cent. Guaranteed, but for not one of these securities have I and my co-trustee been able to find a market. Had it not been for private assistance (on which no trustee has the right to depend) the future career of the beneficiary would in this case have had to be sacrificed. That is one point of view. The other point is that we are not able to take any part of the War Loan, although the beneficiaries who are now in their later teens are most desirous we should place their money at the country's disposal."

The Minister of Munitions announces that he has made an Order, dated 1st October, under section 4 of the Munitions of War Act, 1915, declaring 264 additional establishments as controlled establishments under the Act, as from 4th October, 1915. A total of 979 establishments have now been declared as controlled under the Act from the date of the first order, 12th July, to 4th October inclusive.

In the House of Commons, on the 1st inst., the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in reply to Mr. Currie, said:—I hope to introduce legislation dealing with various matters affecting War Loan, &c., shortly.

The Rev. W. Evans Darby, LL.D., D.D., will retire at Christmas from the secretaryship of the Peace Society, which he has held for more than twenty-five years. The committee have elected him a vice-president and a member of the executive committee.

In the House of Commons, on the 1st inst., the Chancellor of the Exchequer, replying to Sir E. Cornwall, said:—The sales of 5s. scrip vouchers up to the end of August amounted to approximately £244,000. The returns for September by which the progress of demand can be gauged are not yet available. I am not yet in a position to make a statement as to how long the facilities for these investments will remain available.

In the House of Commons, on the 1st inst., Mr. Shirley-Benn asked the Prime Minister if he would consider the advisability of introducing legislation to enable the Public Trustee to pay out of moneys belonging to German citizens all damages done as a result of air raids to private property of British citizens situated in unfortified places. Mr. Asquith: The statute under which the Public Trustee holds German assets declares that the object is to preserve them with a view to arrangements to be made at the conclusion of peace, and the Government is not prepared to vary this announcement.

In the House of Commons, on the 1st inst., Mr. Balfour, replying to a request made by Mr. Middlemore for information as to the number of enemy submarines captured or destroyed, said:—I understand and sympathize with the desire expressed by my hon. friend, and I entirely agree that the mere statement that a German submarine has been destroyed need not convey valuable information to the enemy. The difficulty I feel in satisfying my hon. friend's curiosity has a different origin. It arises from the inevitable margin of doubt which attaches to any attempt to estimate the numbers of enemy submarines destroyed, and the consequent impossibility of giving accurate statistics. A submarine, it must be remembered, is not like an ordinary vessel. If the latter sinks it sinks for ever. There can be no error as to its fate. With a submarine this is not necessarily true; and we have every gradation, from absolute certainty through practical assurance down to faint possibility. Facts like these are not fitted for statistical statement. Were the Admiralty to confine itself to enumerating cases of absolute certainty, we should undoubtedly be understating the truth. If we were to include all the cases of reasonable possibility we might be exaggerating the truth; and no defensible line can be drawn between these two extremes.

The public are cautioned to be sure of obtaining the genuine "Oxford" Sectional Bookcase, as exhibited at "Ideal Homes" and other exhibitions, particulars of which may be obtained free from the sole inventors and manufacturers, William Baker & Co., Oxford. Avoid imitations, which, although similar in name and general appearance, are quite differently constructed, of inferior finish, and more expensive. The "Oxford" is only genuine when connected with the name of WILLIAM BAKER & CO.—(Advt.)
